

Young active patient with a history of bone transport underwent a two level osteotomy (bone cut) in order to correct a Z deformity of the tibia. Patient underwent surgery because of pain associated with chronic stress fractures resulting from the malalignment. Patient was able to return to his job requiring heavy lifting and prolonged standing.

