

Elderly patient with a severely displaced fracture of the calcaneus (heel) treated emergently to prevent skin necrosis. Suboptimal bone quality made surgery challenging. A combination of screws and a soft tissue anchor attached to the achilles tendon helped create stable fracture fixation.

