

Lapidus fusion involves realignment of the bunion through the first tarsometatarsal joint (circle). A fusion of this joint is performed and screws are placed. A Lapidus fusion is typically reserved for the most severe bunion deformities. A second metatarsal shortening (weil) was also performed in this case example because of pain associated with the second metatarsal.

