

Revision Lapidus fusion for failed chevron bunionectomy

Lapidus fusion tends to be the most ideal procedure for a recurrent bunion assuming the bunion is not arthritic. In that case, a fusion tends to be the best option. This patient also required shortening of the 2nd and 3rd metatarsal.

